

Andrew T. Walker serves as the Director of Policy Studies for the Ethics & Religious Liberty Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention, the denomination's entity tasked with equipping Christians and local churches to address ethical issues facing society and the church. In his role, he researches, speaks, and writes about Christian ethics, public policy, and the church's social witness.

His writing and commentary have appeared in such outlets as National Review, Public Discourse, The Gospel Coalition, and elsewhere. He serves as the Director of the ERLC's Research Institute, and also as a Research Fellow. He is the co-author of Marriage Is: How Marriage Transforms Society and Cultivates Human Flourishing. Andrew is the editor alongside Russell Moore of the Gospel for Life series. He is the co-author of the First Freedom Religious Liberty small group curriculum published through LifeWay. His most recent book is God and the Transgender Debate.

He received his Bachelor of Arts degree in Religious Studies from Southwest Baptist University. He received his Master of Divinity, Master of Theology, and Doctor of Philosophy in Christian Ethics from The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. Andrew resides in Franklin, Tennessee with wife and three daughters.